

Is this propaganda?

1. Check how much of the post is facts vs emotional language. Most of this post is factual claims, with two instances of emotional language (using the words "hate" and "worship").

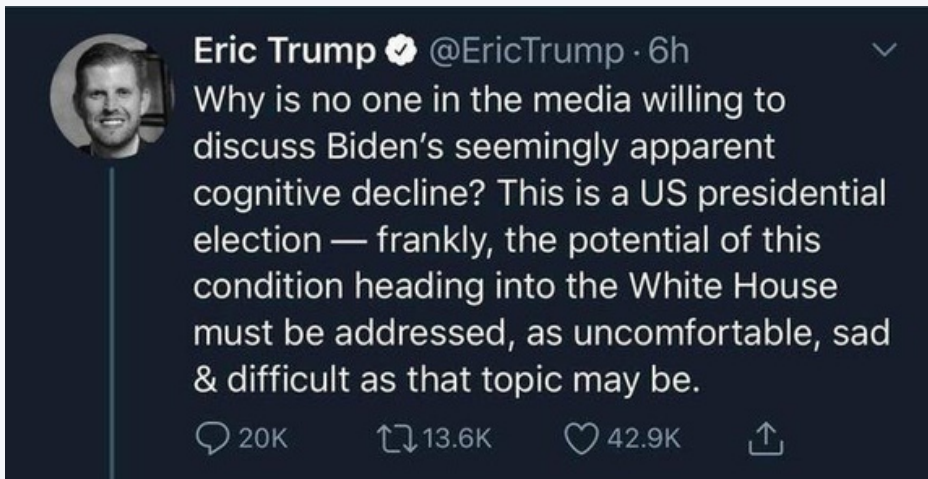

2. Check if any facts included in the post are true. A quick Google search should show that most of the "Nazis" column is broadly accurate with one or two exceptions; and the "Democrats" column is mostly not true. (Democrats in the US are not socialists; while they do promote stricter gun laws than Republicans, "no guns" is a big exaggeration; their platform does not mention media mind control or worshipping the government at any point, etc.)

3. Check where the person posting got their information from. No source is provided for the graphic itself or for any of the claims made.

4. Check whether the post is trying to make you feel angry, guilty, or upset. Yes – the post is trying to make you angry with the Democrats for aligning their policies with Nazis.

Conclusion: Most of the facts in the post are not true; no source is provided for any of the claims made; and the post is trying to make you angry with a particular political group. This post is propaganda.

Is this propaganda?

1. Check how much of the post is facts vs emotional language. A combination – there are a few facts (Biden is in cognitive decline, the media is unwilling to discuss it, there is a presidential election coming up); and some emotional language at the end.
2. Check if any facts included in the post are true. The claim that Biden is in cognitive decline is debatable, with some credible sources on both sides; however on balance it seems likely that he is not. There are many easily accessible media articles about this topic (notice that this post uses one of the phrases to look out for: “No one in the media [is] willing to discuss”).
3. Check where the person posting got their information from. No source is provided.
4. Check whether the post is trying to make you feel angry, guilty, or upset. Yes – the post is trying to make you feel anxious about the possibility of a US President whose cognitive function is not up to the job being elected.

Conclusion: The post’s central claim (the media is unwilling to discuss Biden’s cognitive state) is not true; its secondary claim (Biden is in cognitive decline) is debatable. No source is provided, and the post is trying to make readers feel anxious. This is propaganda.

Is this propaganda?

My research has shown me that "The Getty Museum" is the heart of the cabal particularly what is below 📉📉📉 it. Some say there is a complete underground city a mile deep below with an abundance of everything you can get that is illegal.

Note: Use your own discernment and do your own research. There is a lot out there on this...it's one great big massive rabbit hole.

1. Check how much of the post is facts vs emotional language. No emotional language here – it's all information.

2. Check if any facts included in the post are true. None of the claims in this post are true. Make sure to check the credibility of your sources when fact-checking – does the information come from somewhere reliable and legitimate, like Snopes.com or a mainstream media source, or from somewhere unreliable and potentially biased, like someone's personal blog, or a Facebook page?

3. Check where the person posting got their information from. No source is provided – and the post uses a phrase to watch out for: "Do your own research".

4. Check whether the post is trying to make you feel angry, guilty, or upset. Yes – think about why this was posted. The post is trying to make you feel worried and anxious that something horrible is secretly happening.

Conclusion: None of the claims in this post are true. No sources are provided; and the post uses the suspicious phrase "Do your own research". The post is trying to make readers anxious that something bad is happening, without providing any evidence. This is propaganda.

Propaganda checklist

- Is this post trying to change my opinion or my beliefs?
- Is the post using a lot of emotional language?
- Is the post making claims that I know aren't true? Can I find any reliable sources to back up the post's claims?
- Does the post provide any sources for its information? Are those sources reliable?
- Does the post make me feel angry, anxious, guilty, or upset? Is the post trying to manipulate my emotions?